Knocking bricks down on a screen, by moving your bat from left to right with a joystick, would seem simple enough; until you discover that this is not such a straightforward task.

You will need to muster up all your skills to face numerous on screen distractions. Try not to be tempted by bonus bricks promising such things as extra fire power, speed control and missiles, if you succumb, you face the risk of loosing a life, as the ball chases itself off the screen.

Then there are aliens deflecting the ball, but in aiming at them you also run the risk of forgetting your ultimate task to demolish the brick work and as time ticks away the game is winning ...

There are possible bonuses to pick up, including fire-power, which is operated by the fire button. Once past the 1st screen there are speed bonuses, these slow down the ball and can be won by catching it in the middle of your bat.

At higher levels of difficulty there are lasers and missiles which are won as you pick up bonus bricks, all to improve your chances of clearing the wall but ... getting the bonuses gets harder and as you move up you will discover that there are some bricks that cannot be removed.

However, don't get despondent, this is a game for all levels of skill and with practice you can improve your powers of concentration and perhaps advance a level each time you play.
